

A local Jewish community leader is found murdered in a private chapel on the campus of a rabbinical seminary located in a bucolic city in the midwest, known for its especially pleasant and unusual weather. Josh Schwartz, who is a recovering alcoholic struggling with his own demons is the local rabbi and part-time instructor at the Jewish Institute invited to solve the murder. Filled with colorful characters who navigate the implicit themes of community, authority, and womens rights, this novel also illustrates the challenges implicit in Jewish communal life and leadership in the 21st century.
